Auditor slams $40M reno of Sony Centre

Construction deals.
Awarding of contracts, cost overruns and bookkeeping all questioned

Toronto's auditor general has released a scathing report about another city-owned entity, this time relating to the redevelopment of the Sony Centre for the Performing Arts.

Auditor general Jeffrey Griffiths found "significant issues" with the way $23 million in construction contracts were awarded.

"The majority of contracts we reviewed were not awarded through open and competitive procurement processes," Griffiths wrote.

"In addition, documentation relating to the justification for sole sourcing contracts is deficient and in some cases does not exist."

Certain transactions were also not appropriately accounted for, he wrote.

"These transactions should have been identified and questioned by city staff during their review of the Sony Centre's annual financial statements."

External financial auditors of the Centre will determine whether or not the centre's financial statements require amending.

Prepared at the request of the city's executive committee, the 83-page report suggests "controls" over the construction project were "inadequate" and cites examples of cost overruns, substandard administration and bookkeeping practices and incomplete record-keeping.

The city's audit committee will consider the report at the end of the month.

Griffiths laid some of the blame on city staff for taking a hands-off approach that left the redevelopment with people "inexperienced in managing large-scale projects."

While there has been a significant investment in the renovation of the centre, "the Sony Centre continues to receive over $1 million annually in operating subsidies" as well as future capital requirements, Griffiths noted.

The report contains the response from Sony Centre management, though no one is named.

"Sony Centre Management agrees that certain records (for the construction project) were not 100 per cent complete," the report says.

"Had management been alerted to the document retention policy, all of the records would have been available to the Auditor General."

Dan Brambilla, CEO of the Sony Centre, who is stepping down next month, could not be reached for comment, nor could councillors or Sony Centre board members James Pasternak, Paula Fletcher and David Shiner.

Cost overruns

Costs connected to the renovation jumped 43 per cent over budget and are now expected to top $40 million, up from a projected $28 million.

- Some $11 million of the increased spending was funded by the developer, the report says.

Fire officials return to house made famous for kitties, litter

Beech Ave. Residence where around 60 cats were removed in 2011 visited again, this time to clear out fire hazards

Toronto Fire used a court order to remove flammable materials from a Beech Avenue house made famous for extreme hoarding of possessions and cats. ANDREW FRANCIS WALLACE/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

City of Toronto officials have been called once again to a house on Beech Avenue, which last fall was the site of a case of extreme cat hoarding.

The home — described as overrun with cats, garbage and household items — has been a problem for the neighbourhood since last September, when more than 50 cats were removed by the SPCA.

This time, Toronto Fire obtained a court order from the Ontario Superior Court to investigate the house and remove "excess combustibles."

"(We're) bringing out garbage cans or bags of miscellaneous household items which are either in a state of disrepair, unclean, due to the cats, or worn or broken," said Capt. David Eckerman.

The front of the house was nearly obscured Monday by white tents and crews in hazmat suits. Waste was being tossed into a large disposal unit set up outside the house.

In addition to fire crews, Toronto Public Health officials were also on site, along with police, who emphasized they were there strictly "to keep the peace."

The house first appeared on the public radar in May 2011, and charges were first brought before the house's owner, a woman about 60 years old, in August 2012, Eckerman said.

Eckerman said the priority now is strictly bringing the house up to a level where it complies with fire codes. Toronto Fire estimates the cleanup could take two to three days, but said the basement, the worst floor in terms of violations, has been mostly cleared.

Hoarding reports

There has been some talk at the site of the creation of a so-called "Hoarding Coordination Office," which would work to co-ordinate city departments to clean up hoarding reports more quickly. The initiative is still in its infancy, but is being seriously considered by city representatives, an official said.

GTA rapper represents himself at harassment trial

Sonia Harry says rapper Darren John, a.k.a. "Avalanche the Architect," threatened to kill her in a song. VINCE TALOTTA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

A Mississauga rapper charged with uttering threats and harassment chose to represent himself in court on Monday, cross-examining his accuser, who testified that she felt "extremely scared" by the contents of a song posted online last spring.

Over the course of several hours, the court heard a string of profanities, references to prostitution and sexual violence, and a brief discussion of whether the Incredible Hulk is a "real person." All of it stemmed from the contents of a music video to a song by Darren John, who raps under the name Avalanche the Architect.

The Crown alleges interactions between Sonia Harry and John last May, including the song, which John says is called Got Yourself a Gun, constitute criminal harassment and uttering threats.

John, 36, is also pursuing a motion to have charges struck down under the section of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms that protects artistic expression.

"I was in fear when I watched this. I heard guns," testified Harry, 33, who told the court she approached police after seeing the music video on YouTube. "You said my name … you put it out there like I'm a prostitute."

The video, which was played in court, shows images of Harry and another rapper called Scotian Sparxx, as well as photos of a hand holding a smoking gun that's pointed at the viewer. A section of the lyrics where each line ends with the word "Sonia" describes sexual acts with her, and invites the listener to participate "if you got payments on ya."

John's trial is set to resume in August.

'Jobs are more important than cuts': Wynne

'Frightening' plan.
Premier attacks Hudak's pledge to shrink public sector

Decision Ontario

Premier Kathleen Wynne stepped up her attacks against Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak Monday, calling his plan for the province a "frightening" one that would push Ontario back towards a recession.

At a campaign stop in Vaughan, Wynne hammered away at Hudak's election campaign pledge to shrink the public sector by 100,000 jobs.

"We believe this is exactly the wrong way to go," she said at a carpenters' training centre.

"His approach would sacrifice our fragile economic recovery and would plunge us back toward recession."

Wynne added that the Tory plan would lead to the firing of many people who hire skilled tradespeople for home renovations. Highly trained, skilled apprentices will have trouble finding work if Ontario is plunged back into recession, she warned.

"That's the reality and the frightening prospect of the Hudak PCs."

A Liberal government would safeguard those jobs by investing $130 billion over a decade in infrastructure projects across the province, Wynne said. "Unlike Tim Hudak, we believe that jobs are more important than cuts," she said. "We have a plan to cut ribbons at construction sites, Tim Hudak's plan would cut jobs at construction sites."

Wynne has also promised that the Liberals will balance the books by 2017-2018, while continuing to be the "leanest government" in Canada if re-elected. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hudak targets surging electricity rates

The Progressive Conservatives will slow the rise in electricity rates in Ontario if they win the June 12 election, ensuring the typical household bill will be lower than previously estimated, Opposition leader Tim Hudak promised Monday.

The Tories would import energy from Quebec and the United States, cut the "bloated" bureaucracy at Ontario Power Generation and Hydro One as part of a promise to slash 100,000 jobs in the public sector, and have fewer energy agencies, added Hudak.

They'd also replace subsidies for wind and solar power, which they estimate will save $20 billion a year, and invest in nuclear, natural gas and hydro power, including refurbishing nuclear reactors at the Darlington station in Clarington, he said.

"That means affordable energy, so we can put 40,000 on payrolls across the province," said Hudak, who insisted the figures were backed up by an independent economist. "That works out to about $384 in savings for the typical family from the Liberal plan. That's over four years."

Hudak added: "We know what we'll get from the Liberals.

"The bills will go higher and higher still, a billion dollars from a gas plants scandal that will save a couple of Liberal seats. You folks got stuck with the bill."

Premier Kathleen Wynne cast doubt that the Tories could create 40,000 jobs with their energy plan, deriding it as "a bit of fantasy."

"I have no idea how that connects," she said in Vaughan. "I have no idea how he would do that and continue to do the building and rebuilding of the system that is needed." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horwath pledges to cut HST on hydro bills

A New Democrat government would cut the provincial portion of the HST from hydro bills, an amount equal to about $120 a year for average homeowners, Ontario's NDP Leader Andrea Horwath said Monday.

Campaigning in northern Ontario, Horwath conceded the measure is modest, but said it's one easily implemented — starting in 2016.

"People are shocked when they open their electricity bills," Horwath said.

"After 10 years in power, Liberals have left families paying some of the highest hydro bills in Canada."

Horwath's pledge came at the home of NDP supporter Jeff Caldwell, a working father, who said he would welcome the relief — equal to eight per cent of energy bills.

His last hydro account, he said, cost $17 in HST, and such amounts all add up.

"Where do we get this money?" Caldwell said.

"We've got other responsibilities other than paying for the Liberals' mistakes — not mistakes, recklessness."

Ontario's Liberal government concedes homeowners face a 33 per cent hike in hydro rates over the next three years but say it's lower than previous government estimates.

Horwath said she also wants more control of what Ontario earns when it exports power and said an NDP government would not invest in new nuclear power facilities.

She also said she would honour current contracts, including those that subsidize wind and solar power.

The Liberals, Horwath said, had fumbled green energy in the province, leaving neighbours and communities pitted against one another. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The name's David Sock-knack-eee

Toronto mayoral race. Despite trouble with his name, voters are getting to know candidate's face David Soknacki is an enthusiastic campaigner. He's also keenly aware that he's not nearly as well known as other candidates for mayor of Toronto.

Canvassing in Riverdale, the former city councillor delivers the same opening line at the door: "Knock, knock. I'm David Soknacki. I'm running for mayor."

He has even put out an amusing YouTube video featuring citizens' attempts to pronounce his name. And his campaign has helpfully done a phonetic translation (sock-knack-eee).

After four months of campaigning, Soknacki said he's slowly getting back to the level of recognition he had when he was a major figure in former mayor David Miller's administration as chair of budget.

But he was hardly a household name even when he was one of Miller's lieutenants.

The self-made businessman concedes his public profile is weaker than that of Mayor Rob Ford, former radio host John Tory, former MP Olivia Chow and Karen Stintz, who quit as TTC chair in order to run.

"I have never called myself really high-profile," Soknacki told Torstar News Service. "Yes, I had it in 2006. Memories fade. But I have found in the past three or four weeks that it is starting to build again."

On his swing through Riverdale last week, some residents he spoke with seemed to recognize him. Whether they did or not, people said they were happy to see candidates coming forward to challenge Ford.

A Riverdale resident who didn't want his name published said Soknacki and Stintz risk being squeezed out if voters decide to go for the person best placed to defeat the incumbent.

"Supporters of Rob Ford are saying everybody's out to get him. People who think Rob Ford needs to be replaced are saying they'll vote for Chow or Tory — anybody who'll make sure Ford is replaced," he said.

Knowing he has a way to go, Soknacki was first out of the starting blocks, outlining many of his priorities if elected mayor shortly after registering in early January as a candidate.

Should less tickets mean less officers?

Coun. Doug Ford says the city should cut the number of parking enforcement officers if a bigger staff isn't increasing the number of tickets issued.

He called on frontline police officers to make more efforts to stop and hand out tickets as well, after a report to the government management committee Monday pointed out that 131,400 fewer tickets were issued in 2013 than 2012. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Boko Haram leader wants prisoner swap

Nigeria. Schoolgirls won't be released until detained fighters are freed, extremist says

A Nigerian Islamic extremist leader says nearly 300 abducted schoolgirls will not be seen again until the government frees his detained fighters.

A new video from Nigeria's Boko Haram terrorist network received Monday purports to show some of the girls and young women chanting Quranic verses in Arabic. The barefoot girls look frightened and sad and sit huddled together wearing grey Muslim veils. Some Christians among them say they have converted to Islam.

It is the first video evidence of the girls and young women since more than 300 were kidnapped from a northeastern school on April 15.

"I swear to almighty Allah you will not see them again until you release our people that you have captured," leader Abubakar Shekau says as he cradles an assault rifle in the video.

It is not known how many suspected Boko Haram members are detained by security forces. Hundreds were killed by soldiers last month when Shekau's fighters stormed the military's main northeastern barracks in Maiduguri city, the birthplace of Boko Haram.

Fifty-three schoolgirls have escaped by themselves and 276 are missing, police say.

Wurst-case scenario for many conservative Eurovision fans

Drag queen. European opinion divided after Austrian victory at music competition

Singer Conchita Wurst representing Austria performs the song Rise Like a Phoenix during the final of the Eurovision Song Contest in the B&W Halls in Copenhagen, Denmark, on Saturday. Wurst won the competition. FRANK AUGSTEIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's the beard that divided a continent. The victory of whiskered drag queen Conchita Wurst in the Eurovision Song Contest had celebrities from Nigella Lawson to Russell Brand posting bearded selfies on the Internet in tribute — and Russian men snapping clean-shaven pictures in protest.

For millions of viewers, the annual Eurovision show is a cheesy music competition renowned for its camp, kitsch and electro beats. But the nation-based contest is also a potent mix of patriotism and politics in bubblegum wrapping.

Wurst's win has exposed a divide between Europe's progressives and conservatives that British tabloid The Sun cheekily described Monday as the "Furred World War."

The statuesque brunette with the soaring voice of a diva and a full dark beard called her first-place finish in Saturday's contest a victory for tolerance and respect. Austrian President Heinz Fischer said it was "not just a victory for Austria, but above all for diversity and tolerance in Europe."

But Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin tweeted that Eurovision had shown the true face of European integration: "a bearded girl." On social media, a variety of Russian men posted shaving-foam selfies alongside slogans such as "Get shaved, don't be like a woman!" Pro-Kremlin legislator Olga Batalina — deputy head of the family and maternity issues committee of the lower house of Russia's parliament — said Wurst's victory showed "it's not enough to have a talent and a good voice to win Eurovision; you also need to reject your nature, identity and traditions." She chalked the win up to "aggressive and persistent" gay propaganda.

That may sound like a lot of rhetoric over a talent show but Eurovision has always been more than a simple singing contest. Founded in 1956, the competition pits European nations against one another in pursuit of pop music glory.

But it is more generally loved, and mocked, for its parade of cheesy tunes from quirky performers. The live telecast is watched by some 180 million people and has a particularly strong gay following. It also faces perennial accusations of regional block-voting and geopolitical games.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Not just a song contest

Politics, both personal and international, has often intruded on Eurovision.

- Transsexual Israeli singer Dana International sparked protests by ultra-Orthodox Jews in her homeland in 1998 but went on to win.
- Georgia pulled out in 2009 after its song We Don't Wanna Put In — a dig at Russian leader Vladimir Putin — was judged excessively political.

East Ukraine: Autonomy declared by pro-Russians

People celebrating the declaration of independence for Donetsk region on Monday in Ukraine. ALEXANDER ZEMLIANICHENKO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pro-Moscow insurgents in eastern Ukraine declared independence Monday and sought to join Russia, undermining Ukraine's May 25 presidential election, strengthening the Kremlin's hand and putting pressure on Kyiv to hold talks with the separatists.

Russia signalled it has no intention of subsuming eastern Ukraine the way it annexed Crimea in March. Instead, Moscow is pushing to include eastern regions in negotiations on Ukraine's future — suggesting that Russia prefers a political, not military, solution to its worst standoff with the West since the Cold War.

Such talks are central to a potential path toward peace outlined Monday by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.

The plan laid out by Swiss President Didier Burkhalter calls on all sides to refrain from violence and urges immediate amnesty, talks on decentralization and the status of the Russian language.

That's a key complaint of the armed insurgents who have seized power in eastern regions and clashed with government troops and police. But it's up to the Ukrainian government to take the next step.

Acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk pledged Monday to hold talks with those in Ukraine's east. But he gave no specifics and did not address Sunday's vote or the declarations of independence by the Donetsk and Luhansk regions.

With a national presidential election scheduled in 13 days, the regions of Donetsk and Luhansk declared independence Monday, and those in Donetsk even asked to join neighbouring Russia. The sprawling areas along Russia's border, home to about 6.6 million people, form Ukraine's industrial heartland.

The interim government in Kyiv had been hoping the presidential vote would unify the country behind a new, democratically chosen leadership. Ukraine's crisis could grow worse if regions start rejecting the presidential vote.

Dozens have been reported killed since Ukrainian forces began trying to retake some eastern cities. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

United Nations report slams Canada's record on First Nations

A UN rapporteur is at a loss to explain how a prosperous and sophisticated country like Canada has come to have on its hands a First Nations human-rights problem that has reached "crisis proportions."

James Anaya's report picks a fight with the federal government on several fronts — education, energy projects on reserves and missing or murdered aboriginal women, to name a few — and is sure to amplify tensions between Canada's First Nations and a federal government they so thoroughly distrust.

"It is difficult to reconcile Canada's well-developed legal framework and general prosperity with the human-rights problems faced by indigenous peoples in Canada that have reached crisis proportions in many respects," writes Anaya, the UN's special rapporteur on indigenous rights.

"Moreover, the relationship between the federal government and indigenous peoples is strained, perhaps even more so than when the previous special rapporteur visited Canada in 2003."

Musi-Café owner Yannick Gagné is rebuilding his popular bar in Lac-Mégantic, Que., 10 money, keys and papers signed by a number of deceased employees that was recovered

Lac-Mégantic to rebuild a

'It's not just a building anymore.' Quebec town plans to rebuild the Musi-Café, destroyed in 2013's train disaster, as partly a gathering place, partly a memorial

Time has passed in Lac-Mégantic, but the anxiety has not.

Ten months after the train disaster that killed 47 people in the eastern Quebec town, residents should be gearing up for a bustling tourist season.

Instead, they are still finding their feet after the tragedy and hoping that a construction project begun last week will return some spirit to a town that has known only ghosts since July 6, 2013, when a runaway train loaded with crude oil jumped the tracks and wiped out a swath of the downtown.

The project that is being unveiled Tuesday — the reconstruction of the Musi-Café, a popular local bar — is both emotional and practical.

Practical because the destruction of the rallying point for local revellers, karaoke singers and visiting musical acts has left Lac-Mégantic without a nightlife or place to celebrate moments of joy.

It is charged with emotion because the bar that was located next to the train tracks on the main downtown strip was where about 30 of the 47 victims were enjoying drinks, music and friends when the train flipped, caught fire and exploded.

Just a few things were recovered from the tragedy: a German beer sign, a few beer kegs, a metal drink shaker and a patio umbrella that had been stored in the bar's basement. But the most touching item bar owner Yannick Gagné now has in his possession is the charred steel box that held cash, coins, keys and deposit slips signed by staff, three of whom died that night.

months after the deadly train explosion. On display will be the cash box containing in mid-April from the site of the crash. COURTESY JACQUES DOSTIE attempting little hope

It was thought to have been incinerated in the fires, but was discovered two months ago in debris around the town's former library, down the street from the Musi-Café's former site.

"They put it aside and when they opened it three weeks or one month later, they realized there was too much money for it to belong to the library and there were special objects inside like keys, because I always kept the keys inside," Gagné told Torstar News Service on Monday.

These items, along with some floor planks and tiles that survived the inferno, will make up part of a memorial that will adorn the new bar when it opens in August or September. It will honour all the townsfolk who died that morning, but especially the many whose last moments were inside the bar.

The new Musi-Café will be just 6,000 square feet of commercial space located at the end of Lac-Mégantic's relocated downtown strip, but it is nevertheless an "overwhelming project," said Marc Bovet, head of Bone Structure, the Quebec firm handling the construction.

"It's not just a building anymore," he said. "It's a spirit.

"Yannick has been designated, whether he wanted it or not ... as being the leader of rebuilding this community, and it doesn't all come with bricks and mortar." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Charges filed

The Crown prosecutor's office in Quebec says three people and a train company will face criminal negligence charges stemming from the disaster.

- 47 counts of criminal negligence have been filed against Thomas Harding, Jean Demaitre and Richard Labrie as well as the Montreal, Maine and Atlantic Railway Ltd.

PM pushes tough punishment for harming cop dogs

Prime Minister Stephen Harper was in Edmonton on Monday to meet with police canine units and to announce the introduction of new legislation dubbed Quanto's Law.

The proposed legislation calls for serious consequences for anyone who harms police, service and Canadian Armed Forces animals.

Quanto was an Edmonton police service dog who was stabbed to death while trying to apprehend a fleeing suspect last October.

The legislation proposes Criminal Code amendments to impose a minimum six-month jail sentence for those who kill police dogs. The maximum sentence would be five years.

EBay whale gets positively fed back into the sea

The carcass of a sperm whale that a Newfoundland town tried to sell on eBay has been washed out to sea.

A combination of strong winds and a high tide refloated the remains late Saturday near Cape St. George.

Mayor Peter Fenwick says the 12-metre carcass was last seen floating away in an easterly direction.

Last week, the town listed the beached carcass on the online auction site, but eBay officials pulled the auction, saying it violated its policies regarding the sale of animal parts.

Psychiatrist: Anxiety may have caused killing

Pretoria. Olympic runner Oscar Pistorius is facing murder charges in the death of his girlfriend in 2013

Oscar Pistorius leaves the high court in Pretoria, South Africa.
THEMBA HADEBE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oscar Pistorius has an anxiety disorder that may have contributed to the fatal shooting of his girlfriend, an expert testified at his murder trial Monday, prompting the chief prosecutor to say the double-amputee Olympian should be placed under psychiatric observation.

The judge has not yet ruled on prosecutor Gerrie Nel's application that the court considers a period of mental evaluation for the runner.

Dr. Merryll Vorster, a psychiatrist called by the defence, testified that a series of events in Pistorius' turbulent life, including the amputation of his lower legs as a baby, his parents' divorce, his late mother's habit of sleeping with a gun under her pillow and his own fear of violent crime contributed to his "increasing stress."

Vorster testified that Pistorius appears to be "mistrustful and guarded," and added that he has "many features of anxiety."

Vorster said Pistorius' anxiety and his physical disability may have caused him to act differently from other people when he shot four times through a toilet stall door, killing girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp. Pistorius, 27, claims he mistook Steenkamp for an intruder, but prosecutors say he killed her after an argument and shot in anger, not fear.

Pistorius' chief lawyer Barry Roux said at the start of defence-led testimony that the double amputee's vulnerability and disability was at the centre of his case. But prosecutor Nel questioned whether Pistorius was merely trying one of a number of defences for shooting his girlfriend.

Pistorius, the first amputee to run at the Olympics, testified at his trial that he fired his gun accidentally at the toilet door. That appeared to contradict his initial statement in court documents last year that he shot in self-defence.

Nel said if Pistorius had genuine anxiety issues, Judge Thokozile Masipa should order him to be evaluated. Responding to a question from a reporter after the trial was adjourned, Pistorius said "Go read the law." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hotel owner says he's owed millions for housing evacuees

Autumn Alexander, in this photo from April 24, 2011, pulls her case to an evacuation centre. Her family evacuated from the Roseau River First Nation when displaced by the 2011 flood. Flood of 2011. Last of evacuees left Manitoba hotel in November but bills still outstanding

A Manitoba hotel owner says he has been forced to lay off more than 50 employees, close his hotel and put it up for sale because Ottawa owes him $3 million in unpaid bills.

Mike Bruneau, who owns Misty Lake Lodge in Gimli, says he's owed the money for feeding and housing dozens of aboriginal people who were displaced by the 2011 flood. Bruneau was paid a portion of the cash but says he is owed more. Bruneau says he also needs to be reimbursed for damage to the hotel and interest on the debt.

"They were in my hotel for 2 1/2 years," he said Monday. "(The rooms) aren't rentable. I wanted them to pay my bills, so I could fix the hotel up. They didn't pay my bills, so I couldn't go back to doing weddings and conferences, the kind of stuff I used to do.

Bruneau said he got an $8-million offer to sell four years ago. He isn't expecting to get that much now.

The Manitoba Association of Native Firefighters had been given millions to care for evacuees, but Bruneau said the group stopped paying him when he accused it publicly of squandering money.

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada is auditing the association's handling of the prolonged evacuation and the Red Cross is now responsible for the long-term care of about 2,000 evacuees.

Prosthetic hands get update

DEKA Arm System.
The latest twist on the 1912 invention lets amputees open envelopes, pick up eggs

Modern life is quickly becoming stranger, and for amputees, better than science fiction.

Take the revolutionary new prosthetic limb that looks, and is, completely cutting edge.

The limb is called the DEKA Arm System — and it was developed in New Hampshire by serial inventor/genius Dean Kamen and his team. The thing even has fingernails.

Technology for prosthetic hands hasn't had too many radical advances. Until now, most have been variations on the theme of the 1912 invention of the clasping hook prosthetic.

The DEKA represents a mind-boggling advancement.

Wireless sensors placed under the foot of the user allow them to control six different grips. And that means a user with one hand can now perform previously difficult tasks like opening an envelope.

In this video screenshot, Fred Downs shows how he can use different grips on the DEKA Arm System to open and handle mail. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the system for commercialization last week. SCREENGRAB

The impetus for the invention was a DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) initiative called The Revolutionizing Prosthetics Program. Its goal is "so service members with arm loss may one day have the option of choosing to return to duty."

The new system has just been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, meaning that it can be manufactured, sold. It's powerful enough to hold a hand drill, while sensitive enough to allow a user to pick up items as delicate as eggs.

ME TARZAN, YOU BREADWINNER

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

Earlier this month, Fox News hosted a discussion about whether it's problematic for a woman to make more money than her husband. Apparently, segment host Clayton Morris believes female breadwinners are causing serious martial issues among heterosexual couples.

"Isn't there some sort of biological, innate need for men to be the caveman?" he asked a panel of guests.

A genuinely concerned Morris then went on to argue that men should be responsible for "going out and bringing home the dinner" and it is emasculating for a husband to be out-earned by his wife.

I understand that no one has ever accused the talking heads at Fox of being overly feminist, but this news segment seemed particularly chauvinistic, even for them.

It's hard to believe that people are still clinging to these outdated gender roles. Hosting a televised debate about how "Alpha women" are undermining their husbands and contributing to some sort of imagined societal breakdown seems like something that might have happened in 1954, not 2014.

Are we really supposed to believe that modern men are so fragile and insecure? A 2013 Pew Research Study found that almost a quarter of married mothers in the U.S. earn more than their husbands, which means there must be a lot of bruised male egos out there, according to Morris's caveman logic.

In my opinion, women who are the primary income earners in a relationship are about as "problematic" as husbands who change diapers or do the laundry.

Children are incredibly draining on all of your resources — time, energy and definitely money — and nobody should be criticized for contributing to the family finances.

A man's self-esteem might be closely linked to his career, but so is mine.

The women I know are far more likely to find self-fulfillment by succeeding in a lucrative career than perfecting their ability to bake a cake or be a "good wife" in the traditional, Fox News kind of way.

Raising a family is a joint effort. Married partners are playing on the same team, and men and women shouldn't be competing over their paycheques.

There are so many different types of households, and expecting the partner with the most testosterone to fulfil the role of "provider" at all times is a completely archaic notion.

Female breadwinners aren't an issue; sexist news anchors who broadcast their patriarchal opinions and disapprove of women with high-paying jobs are the real problem in this scenario.

Men should be proud to be coupled up with a successful partner, not worrying about how their wife's salary impacts their own masculine identity.

CANADA DOES GOOD

Stories from hospital hallways

Each month, we profile a Canadian who's up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet:

Who: Jackie Kinder, community volunteer with Childcan, London.
What: Fundraising and organizing community events to help support the families of young people diagnosed with cancer.
Why: To provide the families with the financial and community support they need to focus on their children.

Jackie met 14-year-old Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain-tumour survivor, when she began volunteering with Childcan. "She's my hero," says Jackie. "Knowing what she went through and knowing that through it all she was so brave, so concerned with helping other children, that's what hooked me." Since then, Jackie has taken a leading role fundraising for Childcan, participating in the Inside Ride cycling event and the National Day of Action for kids with cancer at the CN Tower.

Jackie Kinder, right, with Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain tumour survivor. CONTRIBUTED

What motivated you to get involved with families dealing with childhood cancer?
"You don't leave a child alone in the hospital — you're there for the long haul, and it's incredibly demanding on the family. When families come into the hospital, Childcan has people there right away to offer support. We bring them into the Childcan family, and I fundraise to help with gas, cafeteria vouchers, parking and credit-card bills. The financial hardships are major — but help is always there."

You've spent your life working with young people, first as a teacher and now as a volunteer. What advice do you have for them?
"Take the time to find and develop your passion for a cause. I've met some wonderful volunteers, and they are all happier for the work they do. They've learned that happiness doesn't mean all that you own — it's about giving back to other people. It's something I learned from Stephanie: it's the feeling you get doing something worthwhile for other people in your community that keeps us going."

Every year, the city of Hamburg celebrates its harbour's birthday with a massive bash along the Elbe. Drawing more than one million people, the harbour party features vessel parades, something called a tugboat ballet and the much more humble-sounding dragon boat race.

But this is a party, after all. And what party is complete without music? Enter the enormous cruise ship MSC Magnifica — launched from this very harbour in 2010 — and its bone-rattling, horn-fired rendition of Seven Nation Army.

St. Vincent wants all of your mind this summer

Indie musical landscape. Singer Annie Clark comes into her own, creating a live show unlike any other St. Vincent concert

PAT HEALY
Metro World News in Boston

Just because St. Vincent's summer itinerary is packed with more than a dozen festival dates on four continents doesn't mean that Annie Clark is scaling back the theatrics of the St. Vincent concert experience.

The singer and guitarist will still force herself down a giant set of pink stairs, writhe around against a storm of strobe lights and eventually command the procession, purposefully poised like a cross, from an oversized pink throne.

"We've worked really hard on this strange fever dream of a show, bringing it to life," says Clark, "so it's important that people get the whole experience, even if it's at a festival."

That "strange fever dream of a show," along with the self-titled fifth St. Vincent album, may be the most definitive statement from any artist this year. From Clark's fat guitar leads to her strange and simple lyrics — any of which can be pulled out to illustrate what St. Vincent is all about in 2014 — it feels like the artist has truly discovered her identity.

"I'll always be evolving and be restless and wanting to move violently into the future," says Clark of arriving at something that could be considered iconic, "but I was reading Miles Davis's autobiography and it was saying how the hardest thing about being a musician is to sound like yourself. I can hear one note of Miles or Coltrane and know that it's them and it's the world that they have painstakingly created to be unmistakable. I just thought that this record for me was something where I had successfully created a landscape that was my own."

This landscape includes Clark's stylized lavender/gray old lady hair, of which she says: "Everyone is really obsessed with being young and youth culture and this sort of erroneous idea that things are the best when you are young, and I am young, but I wanted to see what it would look like to go in the opposite direction." And this landscape also includes conscious choreography in the live show, the likes of which hasn't been seen on a St. Vincent tour before. Clark says she was inspired by doing an album and tour with David Byrne, whose live show included an eight-piece brass band moving around the stage and creating what Clark says was "this whole other level of drama and whimsy and symbolic subconscious meaning that the audience can pick up on."

"I wanted to create a real experience for people, especially in this day and age where we are kind of obsessed with capturing moments at the expense of living them," she says. "I wanted to encourage people as much as possible to be present and be so engrossed in the show that they are not tempted to check their text messages."

DVD review

Her

Director. Spike Jonze

Stars. Joaquin Phoenix, Scarlett Johansson

Most sci-fi films make a human/machine love connection seem perverse or at least far out, yet Spike Jonze's Her treats it as a mild novelty.

Set about five years in the future in techno-fabulous L.A., it's nominally a simple sci-fi romance of a man, played by Joaquin Phoenix, falling in love with a machine, voiced by Scarlett Johansson.

There's much more going on than this, of course, as you'd expect from the director who brought us the layered head-spinners Being John Malkovich, Adaptation and Where the Wild Things Are.

Jonze is really interested in the difficulty of making and maintaining emotional and intellectual ties, no matter whether the heart is made of flesh or silicon.

Extras include several making-of featurettes.

Stalingrad

Director. Fedor Bondarchuk

Stars. Thomas Kretschmann

Directed by Putin loyalist Fedor Bondarchuk, Stalingrad seeks to depict exactly why the 1942 Nazi siege of the Volga River city, now called Volgograd, is known as "the bloodiest battle in human history."

Early scenes of soldiers as human fireballs, charging through hellish conditions as they struggle to protect the Motherland, fulfil the understandable Russian imperative to dramatize the Stalingrad confrontation as a turning moment in the national struggle during World War II.

Stalingrad largely succeeds in sensory terms but doesn't fare so well in dramatic ones.

Extras include an English dub and a making-of featurette. PETER HOWELL

Angel Olsen gets personal

Lonely love songs. The emotionally charged singer relies only on herself as a songwriter, and the result is beautifully intimate

PAT HEALY
Metro World News in Boston

Angel Olsen's Burn Your Fire For No Witness is out now on Jagjaguwar.
CONTRIBUTED

When Angel Olsen was working on her second studio album, Burn Your Fire For No Witness, which came out in February, she says she frequently found herself adhering to the whole For No Witness idea.

"It was all written in the same period, so whenever inspiration came to me, I would stop what I was doing because I could, because I was working for myself," she says. "So it was like, 'I can go home now — instead of this party — and write all of these things!'"

Wait, so she would literally leave parties?

"I remember weird examples," she confirms. "I wrote Iota when it was the middle of summer and I was having kind of a weird day, and my friends had this family picnic at the park and I left. At the time, we lived in Chicago and we had access to this place that had a rooftop. I went up there and had a beer and a guitar. It was just me by myself and I recorded [it] on my phone."

The resulting album includes the sort of confessional musings that might occur in conversation between close friends a few beers deep. Her vocals and lyrics are equally intimate.

"Just listening back to stuff of mine, it's like, 'OK, I guess I'm pretty obsessed with the idea of death and being alone and losing people,' but it's also about finding people," she says. "I don't know if people get anything from it, but I'm not trying to create a kind of cathartic experience for anyone; it just happens to be the things I write about."

Olsen says the way she writes music has changed, because the way she listens to music has changed.

"I would listen to these songs and be like, 'Why are these people always talking about love?' They're just so disappointed and so lonely, it's ridiculous," she says. "And then I would listen to it again, and the more you live, the more that these simple thoughts cut deeper. You have more experiences with people and more experiences in general, with your friendships changing; I think that I've developed a different perspective on writing songs on stuff like that and embracing it. I think that's why I tend to obsess over it."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Community doesn't make the cut for a sixth season

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Community's cast of comedians. HANDOUT

The drama behind the scenes on beleaguered NBC sitcom Community was always nearly as compelling as the jokes onscreen. Perennially low-rated, Community faced cancellation every year for its five seasons. Now the scrappy little show that could finally can't: NBC gave it the axe last week.

The show's obsessive fans won't give up at such a minor setback, however. Fans have already begun petitioning production company Sony to shop Community to other networks.

But the plan won't work unless the most important fan of all, creator/showrunner Dan Harmon, is onboard, and he sounds decidedly unenthused.

"[W]hen Sony called me on Friday with the news, there was brief discussion at the end of the call about the concept of the show living elsewhere, and I was definitely in the 'eh' column," he writes on his blog.

"For a million reasons, some selfish, some creative, one logistic, five sexual, three racist (in a good way) and, oddly, nine isometric."

Ben's gambling Garners negative attention from Jennifer

Ben Affleck is developing quite a reputation in Las Vegas, with several casinos accusing the Argo star of card counting — and his wife, Jennifer Garner, is less than thrilled, according to Star magazine. "Jen demanded to go to Vegas with Ben because she doesn't trust him, and he felt like he had no choice but to take her," a source says of the couple's visit last month that didn't end well for Affleck. "But after their dinners there each night, she would go back to their suite while Ben would stay out all night playing cards, betting thousands of dollars at a time. It makes Jen so mad, but once Ben starts gambling he can't stop." Until the casino intervenes, at least. And the source claims that when Affleck was busted by the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino, Garner was by his side: "She looked totally bored and annoyed," the source says.

Solange Knowles GETTY IMAGES

She may be young, but she's ready to throw down

In an exclusive video from TMZ.com, you can see Beyoncé's sister, Solange Knowles, viciously attacking Jay-Z in an elevator after the Met Ball. A man who appears to be Jay Z's bodyguard holds the swinging and kicking Knowles back, but she makes contact with the Hova at least three times. For her part, Beyoncé just kind of stands there.

The video was taken by a surveillance camera in the elevator of the Standard Hotel after the big gala on May 4th during an after party. As TMZ.com points out, the bodyguard stops the elevator at one point, probably in hopes of keeping this private affair private.

Too late.

Looks can be deceiving — even when it comes to boredom

Why do we get bored?
One professor weighs in

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News in New York City

Researchers believe there are five types of boredom. ISTOCK

You might think it's your fault you're dozing off in a classroom or office, but that's not always the case.

There are clear categories of boredom triggered by one's environment, says pioneering researcher Dr. Thomas Goetz from the University of Konstanz in Germany (see sidebar).

What the most common misconception about boredom?
It's important to recognize the different types, and clearly define the differences.

You say apathetic boredom is the worst — why?
The problem is that it makes every experience negative and the potential for arousal is low. You can't do anything against this state and it can become a big problem related to depression.

What puts us at risk?
People tend to a specific state but only to a small degree; each experience is based on situations. It's important that people recognize the forms. Often the problem is a lack of freedom, such as at school. Teachers should be aware and try to find individualized methods that give students choice.

Is there a risk that teaching boredom could cause more boredom?
There is an argument from anxiety research that awareness increases the problem, but in this case it is about knowing and realizing, and this goes hand in hand with resolving it.

What follow-up research is needed?
We didn't measure the effects. We need diagnostic instruments to show the experiences of boredom.

Types of boredom

Here are the various categories.

- Indifferent boredom. A relaxing, possibly positive type – "a general indifference to, and withdrawal from, the external world."
- Calibrating boredom. Wandering thoughts — "general openness to behaviours aimed at changing the situation."
- Searching boredom. "Actively seeking out specific ways of minimizing feelings of boredom."
- Reactant boredom. Causes sufferers "to leave the boredom-inducing situation and avoid those responsible for this situation (e.g., teachers)."
- Apathetic boredom. Impossible to break from this mode – "dangerous, similar to depression."

Talking about ovarian cancer

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-chief
Best Health Magazine

Raising awareness about ovarian cancer is crucial: 2,600 women are diagnosed with ovarian cancer in Canada each year. More than half will die. Plus, no effective screening test exists (many women believe the Pap test can detect this disease, but it can't), and the symptoms are hard to detect.

Melissa Greer writes about the issue in the current issue of Best Health magazine — Canada's healthy lifestyle magazine for women.

Women with the BRCA 1 or BRCA 2 gene mutation, who have a high risk of ovarian cancer, can reduce their risk of death before age 70 by 77 per cent if they have their ovaries removed. The research, published online in February in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, suggests that women with BRCA 1 who have this procedure by age 35 show the greatest benefit — reducing their risk of ovarian, Fallopian tube or peritoneal cancer by 80 per cent.

Ovarian Cancer Canada is holding fundraising events across Canada this year called Love Her (the next one is in Vancouver on May 28). At the Toronto event a couple of months ago, the lead author of the study cited above — the world-renowned Dr. Steven Narod of Women's College Research Institute in Toronto — shared the exciting news.

Pelvic or abdominal pain that lasts more than three weeks could be a symptom of ovarian cancer. ISTOCK

As national magazine partner to Love Her, Best Health was at the event to hear a moving speech by Bailey Urquhart, a 25-year-old from Hamilton, Ont., who was diagnosed with stage III ovarian cancer about a year ago. She had a complete hysterectomy (including removal of her ovaries) and underwent chemotherapy.

"You know your body best, and it's important to be your own advocate," Urquhart told the audience. She also reinforced the importance of being aware of the symptoms (including pelvic or abdominal pain that lasts longer than three weeks). In her case, her symptoms were overlooked by doctors time and time again.

Travis Stork. Doc's tips

Dr. Travis Stork is a practising emergency medicine physician and an Emmy-nominated host of The Doctors. These are his top health tips.

• Visit your doctor once a year and your dentist twice a year for check-ups; regular check-ups with your doctor and dentist helps uncover issues earlier.

• Oral health is an important part of your overall health, so practise a daily oral care routine which includes flossing, brushing for two full minutes twice a day, and rinsing. Only 44 per cent of Canadian adults claim to follow this oral care routine regularly, and not surprisingly more than half of Canadians suffer from gingivitis.

• Try to get seven to eight hours of sleep a night. Establish a routine and get in sync with your body's rhythm. Here's a good test: If you're getting up without an alarm in the morning, you're most likely getting enough sleep. NEWS CANADA

Mary had a little lamb

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

Mary had a little lamb, because the meat is moist and rich and satisfying, and a little lamb is all you need. Bahaha. OK, that's enough.

Delicious lamb is raised in Canada and is generally a local, grass-fed food.

That said, if you don't check the label, you are more than likely enjoying an imported product from New Zealand.

Lamb leg or rump can be a little higher in fat and calories but it has all of the benefits of other animal meats like protein, B12 and zinc.

Lamb chops are generally a quick-cooking, leaner option and a nice change.

There is a slightly gamey flavour to lamb that can be an acquired taste but chops are generally milder. For newbies, sweet flavours like mint or raspberry are great compliments to minimize the grassiness.

The trick for cooking lamb chops is to be sure to preheat the grill to a very high heat but to only cook each chop for three or four minutes per side.

The protein is delicate and the meat is thin, so chops don't need much attention to be tender and delicious.

Let the chops rest for a few minutes before serving so that all of the juices remain within the meat.

FLASH FOOD

From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

For an interesting presentation, place salad greens in mason jars and drizzle dressing. Or, simply serve as salad topped with chops.

1. In large shallow dish, whisk together the raspberry vinegar, Dijon mustard, soy sauce, fresh or dried rosemary, olive oil and minced garlic. Spoon half of the mixture into a separate bowl and thin with water to make dressing.

2. Add the lamb chop in single layer, turning to coat well. Cover and marinate on counter for 10-20 minutes or up to 24 hours covered in fridge, turning occasionally.

3. Discarding marinade, place chops on greased grill over medium-high heat; cook for about 5 minutes per side for medium rare or to desired doneness. Let rest or place into jars as below immediately to keep moist and warm.

4. For an interesting presentation, place salad greens in mason jars and drizzle dressing. Or, simply serve as salad topped with chops.

From moccasins and meadows to a high-heeled, haute couture career

A model upbringing?
North of Normal chronicles an unconventional childhood in the Canadian wilderness and its impact on a future in fashion

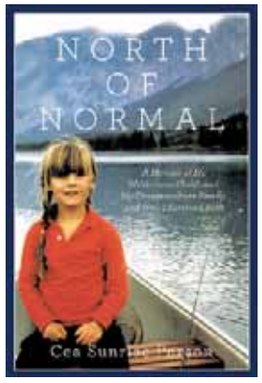
Cea Sunrise Person graced magazines, catalogues, print ads and TV commercials for nearly two decades as an international model — a stark contrast to childhood years spent living in the Canadian wilderness.

In her memoir, North of Normal, Person chronicles her unconventional upbringing with her pot-growing, free-loving family dwelling in a teepee and living off the land. The book also reveals the challenges of life with her late mother Michelle as the duo left the family behind and Michelle pursued a string of topsy-turvy relationships.

The Vancouver-based author writes of her anti-establishment grandfather known as Papa Dick who decided to relocate the free-spirited family of hippies from California to Canada.

Eighteen months after Person's birth to her teen mom in 1969, her family relocated to a remote piece of land near a First Nations reserve in northern Alberta. Until the age of five, Person and her mother lived with Papa Dick, her grandmother and aunts in Kootenay Plains and Morley, Alta., hunting and gathering their food and creating a stove dubbed the Guzzler fashioned out of an old barrel.

"I had dresses made from hides ... my grandmother would sew my moccasins from leather she'd tanned herself," recalled Person in an interview, noting that the rest of her clothing came from Salvation Army when her grandfather made occasional trips into town.



Person, 44, recalled an "amazing feeling of freedom" as a self-described nature child galloping in the meadow and fields. But exposure to more adult activities as a youngster also left lingering memories for Person which she candidly shares in her memoir.

Resilience on the runway

"Even though the world of modelling has its dark side, for me, it was a saviour. It gave me the independence that I needed."

Cea Sunrise Person
Author of North of Normal

"I felt so alone in my experiences because how can you tell your friend when you're 10 years old you've seen and heard sex happen in front of you 100 times?.. Or that your mom smokes pot every day or that your mom's boyfriend does mushrooms?

"Putting it out there made me feel a lot less alone. And it made me feel like I hope that I can connect with some people out there who may have had the same experiences."

Despite seeing the writing experience as cathartic, she admits it was hard to write about her early teen years prior to starting modelling when she felt "rudderless."

"I wasn't the wilderness child anymore. I was terrified of my future because I didn't want to end up like my family. I didn't know what my escape route would be, but I desperately wanted a different life and I didn't know what it was going to be like."

Modelling helped to serve as an anchor, as Person worked full-time in the industry from age 13 to 30. While Person said she enjoyed the chance to travel to amazing locales, her memoir also illustrates the not-so-glamorous side of the business, like living in grungy apartments or seeing other girls battling bulimia.

Person credits her wilderness smarts and a resourcefulness and resilience built from childhood in being able to emerge relatively unscathed.

"It was a healthy escape for me. Even though the world of modelling has its dark side, for me, it was a saviour. It gave me the independence that I needed."

While she often felt like an outsider growing up and found difficulty forging friendships, Person was able to form those connections with other models, many of whom she remains close with today.

"It's a very tight bond that you get with these girls because we're in such an interesting, weird world together."

Keep on top of bookkeeping along with your other daily tasks. ISTOCK

If you think filing taxes for one individual or a household is hard, imagine what those who generate income through self-employment as sole proprietors must suffer through, with countless receipts, meetings, payroll and expense claims.

The endless numbers can be a real pain in the you-know-what ahead of the June 15 deadline for the self-employed.

Here are a few useful tips to help small business owners (and in some cases their employees) cope with last-minute tax responsibilities, courtesy of Lior Zehtser, a chartered professional accountant:

Separate your business bank account and business credit card from your personal bank and credit cards.
Taxes, like death, are unavoidable. An easy way to ensure your annual filing is as smooth as possible is to keep track of expenses and the easiest way to do that is to separate personal accounts and credit cards from ones used solely for business purchases. Should you be audited this will also cut down on finding necessary documents to provide the CRA.

Get some training on how to do bookkeeping and a lesson on what expenses are deductible. Even if this costs you in the short term, the benefits in the long term are significant.
Hiring a professional accountant to look over your accounts can help you with last-minute filings, but visiting the Canada Revenue Agency's website or taking a short course on bookkeeping to learn more about how to file taxes will help you take advantage of tax credits and bookkeeping help prior to visiting a professional.

Be organized! Keep your invoices for all of your income and receipts/bills for your expenses in a folder or electronic folder, preferably separated by category (advertising, meals, supplies, etc).
Create a better tax system for future years by keeping track of expenses and receipts. Using file labels, Excel sheets and store-bought tax software can help small business owners keep organized and avoid last-minute filing.

GAIN GLOBAL EXPERIENCE

WITH CENTENNIAL COLLEGE PROGRAM

There is no need to sacrifice the desire to see the world for your dream of post-secondary education , do both at Centennial College.

The global experience opportunities (GEO) program in the school of business at Centennial College gives students the chance to spend a semester abroad at one of Centennial's partner colleges or universities and receive full credit at Centennial for all successfully completed courses.

"We recognize that every student has different goals academically and professionally and diversity of global opportunities is meant to support student's individual priorities," says Yana Avdyeyeva, manager, international mobility, Centennial College.

The focus of the program is to offer diverse opportunities such as semester exchanges at partner universities abroad, international internships, language and culture programs, as well as service learning opportunities.

Participating in one of the global programs allows students to add an international dimension to their academic learning experience at Centennial. Students can acquire an understanding of their field of study from an international perspective, which greatly broadens their perspective.

CONTRIBUTED

"Students develop a wide range of skills and competences such as intercultural communication, self-awareness, flexibility, and cultural sensitivity, that are now simply a must in any professional environment, be it public or private sector or any other career path they may choose," Avdyeyeva says.

Centennial offers school of business students many options to spend a semester abroad studying at partner universities in South Korea, Denmark, Spain, Germany, or Finland.

Other business students choose to gain practical work place experience in an international setting by doing their co-op or internship placements abroad.

"We notice a stark difference in students before and after they return from abroad," Avdyeyeva says. "Having spent a semester abroad, or even two weeks, students report to be more self-aware, independent, confident, able to solve problems independently and globally aware."

For more information, please visit centennialcollege.ca/exchange.

BURSARY CAN COVER EXPENSES

While the tuition remains same, students are required to cover the costs of their living expenses and travel while abroad.

To help with the costs, every student that gets selected to participate receives a bursary to help cover major expenses.

To learn more about the experiences of students, visit the GEO blog at theglobal-experienceblog.wordpress.com.

Hannah Eden of Sheffield, England, always wanted to study photojournalism in Canada.

Her mother was Canadian and they had visited Canada many times while Eden was growing up. In 2012, they came to Canada to tour some Ontario campuses.

"As I walked down the hallway, looking at the photographs taken by graduates, I felt like I was in the 'Hall of the Greats'" Eden says about her tour of the Loyalist campus and the photojournalism program.

"I recognized shots I'd seen in magazines and newspapers and realized the photojournalists who had taken these amazing pictures had studied at Loyalist."

At that moment, Eden knew Loyalist was where she had to be.

Eden is completing her first year and advocates strongly for the program.

"Never before have I been so challenged — it's exhilarating," Eden says.

"I had taken some photography classes prior to coming to Canada, but the faculty here makes me dig deeper."

Eden has decided to challenge herself even further this summer by packing her bags and heading to Dawson City.

As Canada's only multi-year photojournalism program, Loyalist grads are working across Canada, from the biggest dailies to smaller weekly newspapers, wire services and other publications.

Humber College can help you launch your career

Humber College student Abby Greenbloom's interest in international relations began in high school when she joined the Model UN club.

Greenbloom is now set to participate in an internship in the Commercial Policy and International Business Development unit at the Canadian Embassy in Washington D.C., through the internship portion of the public administration program at Humber College.

"I was looking for a program that would help me launch my career and provide more practical hands-on experience throughout the program," says Greenbloom, who will complete her Ontario postgraduate certificate in August.

"I choose Humber because of the opportunities this program presented — the internship component, the classes, and the faculty — and because of Humber's reputation."

Greenbloom chose the public administration program because she decided she wanted to focus on making a difference at home.

"I felt this was the best way to learn everything I needed to know about the political and bureaucratic systems in Canada and in Ontario," Greenbloom says.

These types of internships are part of the Humber College public administration program and are a valuable tool for students looking to create a strong network and to help them get their foot in the door of future places of employment.

Immerse yourself at Humber College

Hands-on training helps educate students

Not all career training can be done behind a desk and a textbook since many careers require hands-on training to best educate students.

To assist students in being best prepared for their chosen field, Humber College school of social and community services employs significant simulator and experiential learning technology.

"Students learn in different ways," says Henri Berube, professor, police foundations, Humber College. "When theory provided in a classroom setting is augmented with an immersive, simulated scenario/case study, students are given a chance to apply what they have learned and to have key principles reinforced in a very real, tactile environment."

The Centre for Justice Leadership recently acquired a confrontation management/tactical communication simulator and a driving simulator, which will give students the opportunity to be able to explain and record their responses and critically analyze scenarios and behavioural responses.

These new state-of-the-art simulators will provide an additional experiential learning component to multiple programs within the school of social and community services including the police foundations program.

"They provide an immersive experience where students can apply what they have learned in a classroom setting in a safe, nurturing environments," Berube says.

Humber College police foundations program's Centre for Justice Leadership is also home to a forensic studio where students learn and apply basic forensic techniques including lifting and examining fingerprints, crime scene photography, examining blood spatter, tire and shoe print impressions, and other widely used forensic techniques.

The forensic studio is complemented by a crime scene gallery classroom where students can interact with crime scene scenarios set up by their instructors.

The campus is also equipped with interview and polygraph rooms designed for learning interview and interrogation skills, including a polygraph room. Finally, students learn how to put together all the key elements of a police investigation and present their evidence in an 85-seat mock courtroom. "Our goal is to provide students who aspire to a career in the justice field with a safe yet relevant learning experience," Berube says.

City still playing in United's shadow

Manchester City has deposed its neighbour as Premier League champions for the second time in three years, but is not close to usurping United's global supremacy — both as a football club and as a brand.

Even Premier League officials marked the end of the season by assuring United's owners of the team's enduring power.

"They are the world's largest football club in my view with huge resources, with huge determination and a fantastic fan base," league chief executive Richard Scudamore told Sky Sports television. "Of course their time will come again."

NHL playoffs. Canadiens' shutout win forces Game 7 back in Boston

Game 6

Canadiens	Bruins

Max Pacioretty broke out of a scoring slump with a goal and an assist in the second period and Carey Price made 26 saves as the Montreal Canadiens downed the Boston Bruins 4-0 to force a seventh game in their Eastern Conference semi-final series on Monday night.

The series is tied 3-3 going into Game 7 on Wednesday night in Boston.

Pacioretty, who had only one assist in the first five games, scored and set up Thomas Vanek's goal in the second period. Lars Eller scored in the first for Montreal and Vanek added his second of the game into an empty net with 3:56 left in regulation time.

Rookie Nathan Beaulieu, the Canadiens' 2011 first-round draft pick who was given a surprise start by coach Michel Therrien, picked up an assist in his first NHL playoff game and was plus-2.

The Canadiens repeated the scenario of their 2011 first-round series against the Bruins, winning at home to force a Game 7. That year, they lost the decisive game in overtime.

Despite having the best of the play in the opening 20 minutes, the Canadiens needed a freak play for the only goal.

Kevan Miller lost the puck off his stick behind the Boston net and then inadvertently tripped goalie Tuukka Rask as he tried to smother it, leaving Eller free to score unassisted 2:11 into the game.

MLB. Buehrle reaches 7th heaven thanks to Halos

Mark Buehrle picked up his Major League-leading seventh win of the season with the help of the long ball Monday night as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Los Angeles Angels 7-3 at the Rogers Centre.

The veteran left-hander gutted it through six-plus innings despite not possessing his best stuff, running his record to 7-1 before a crowd of 13,603. Buehrle gave up six hits and walked five but was able to limit the Angels to just a pair of runs even though he had base runners in each of his final five innings.

It marks the first time in his 15-year career that Buehrle has won seven of his first eight starts.

Jose Bautista and Brett Lawrie gave Buehrle all the offence he needed.

Each drilled second-deck home runs as the Blue Jays (19-20) ended a three-game losing streak and salvaged the finale of the four-game series.

Bautista's blast was his 178th as a Blue Jay, moving him to within one of Jesse Barfield for fifth all-time on the club's home run list.

Bautista, who had his club-record streak of reaching base in consecutive games to start the season snapped at 37 on Sunday, went 3-for-4 on the night to push his season average to .300. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defoe relegated to standby list

Hodgson calls his 23-man squad for Brazil.
TFC striker 'devastated'

A "devastated" Jermain Defoe will be watching the World Cup from afar, barring an injury call-up from England.

The 31-year-old Toronto FC forward did not make England's main 23-man squad which features Wayne Rooney, Daniel Sturridge, Danny Welbeck and Rickie Lambert at forward. Instead the Major League Soccer star was one of two strikers named to England's seven-man standby list.

Defoe said he felt sharp, was scoring goals and thought he had done enough to make the team. He added he had also been looking forward to representing his country in Brazil.

"You can't expect anything but I did feel like I had a good chance of going because I've been in most of the squads if not all the squads," he told BBC Radio.

Jermain Defoe
TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

"So, to miss out ... I don't know, I just feel devastated, to be honest," he added.

Asked by the BBC if coming to Toronto was a mistake, Defoe said "Not at all."

On a personal level, Defoe said it was difficult. But he wished the England team the best of luck.

Toronto manager Ryan Nelsen said Defoe will remain with the MLS club unless summoned by England.

"I was a bit surprised and disappointed for Jermain because he arguably deserves it," Nelsen said from Vancouver, where Toronto plays the Whitecaps in the second leg of their Amway Canadian Championship semifinal Wednesday.

Toronto's practice was closed Monday.

"Of course he's disappointed. Anybody would be," said Nelsen.

Toronto will be losing Brazil goalie Julio Cesar and U.S. midfielder Michael Bradley to the soccer showcase.

Horoscopes

Aries
March 21 - April 20
You have started many new things in recent weeks but you will soon have to choose which one or two projects you are going to focus on. There's no point trying to do it all.

Taurus
April 21 - May 21
With the Sun moving through your birth sign you are eager to start something new. Don't wait for Lady Luck to drop opportunities into your lap — get out there and create them yourself.

Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Everyone has daydreams but the power of your imaginings could lead you in some unusual directions. Try to keep a grip on reality today, otherwise your mind could float away!

Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Work hard but leave yourself time for fun too. Friends will come by when you least expect it and you should be ready to drop what you are doing and make them feel welcome.

Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
You will be extraordinarily assertive on the work front, but you could also annoy people who think you are trying to usurp their position. You must stay on good terms with those in positions of power.

Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You will find that a number of questions you have been asking over the past few weeks will answer themselves. Whether or not the answers are to your liking, at least you will know what it all means.

Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Fears you thought had been put behind you will return in unexpected ways. However, if you face up to those fears and deal with them bravely the planets indicate this will be the very last time they bother you.

Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The next few days are mainly about relationships. Challenges must be dealt with and certain people must be told in no uncertain terms that you are the boss. Compromise is possible, but only after you establish your authority.

Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If you need to make changes in your working environment now is the time. Some of your colleagues won't like what you do but that's too bad. Either they fit in with your plans or they move out.

Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
This is one of the best times of the year for you and you really should be making the most of it. Most things are possible, so set your sights high and make greatness your goal.

Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
A difference of opinion with a friend or family member could get out of hand, so promise yourself no matter what is said you won't overreact. Soon all will be forgotten.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Travel is on the cards but so are hold-ups and unexpected diversions. Wherever you end up you'll have a lot of fun, so don't stay home – get out into the world. SALLY BROMPTON
